

Consciousness and the Internet.

We are all connected to a higher state of consciousness. We may call it our gut feeling or intuition and it's also called many other things such as our souls, higher selves, our guides and helpers, differing names for what is actually the same thing.

Everyone is connected however our education and western society don't acknowledge it and yet this is where our purpose and happiness reside. Ever wonder where true happiness actually is?

Due to upbringing the vast majority of westerners have only a very narrow connection to this higher state. It's a bit like a dial up connection to the Internet. If we consider the higher state of consciousness as the internet, yes it has it's dark side and we all do, then the internet is a good analogy as it contains more 'information' than we can begin to imagine.

The plants open our connection, it literally becomes broadband and with this high-speed connection we begin to see more opportunities and with these excitement arises that brings new motivations and direction. Once we experience this level of connection it cannot be undone and we create positive change with a renewed sense of purpose and wellbeing.

David Walton

www.munaymedicine.com